

Interior Design: @marindesignco | Photography: @nicolediannephoto

@marindesignco

We like to think of the mantle as the centerpiece of holiday design. It's an exercise in creativity with plenty of opportunities to layer texture, color, and natural greens. Marin Design Co. did all of the above and created the ultimate living room focal point.

Interior Design: @thelifestyledco | Photography: @madi.robison

@thelifestyledco

Neutral, but never boring. That's the approach the team behind THELIFESTYLEDCO took to this year's holiday design, with tones of white, cream, gray, and gold. It's a color palette that never goes out of style and allows the greenery to speak for itself.

Interior Design: @audreyscheckdesign

@audreyscheckdesign

We had the pleasure of getting to know Audrey Scheck at this year's Design Camp. Upon meeting, we quickly picked up on her innate talent, so this beautiful scene from her home comes as no surprise. It's holiday inspiration that's well worth pinning for future reference.

Interior Design: @hausguerin

@hausguerin

We've always believed holiday decor doesn't have to be over-the-top. Luckily, Kaelyn Guerin shared that mindset and showed us how to make impactful moments with the smallest of details. Cue the lyrics: brown paper packages tied up with strings.

Interior Design: @kcdesignco

@kcdesignco

When you combine fresh greens, bundled firewood, and chunky woven blankets, you get holiday inspiration like no other. And the miniature trees on the mantle are a *chef's kiss* to seasonal cheer.

Interior Design: @jaci.daily

@jaci.daily

Leave it to Jaci Hodge to bring our minimalist holiday dreams to life. She deemed this a “naked tree” look, and now we’re left wondering if ornaments are even necessary.

Interior Design: @grahamhilldesign | Photography: @juliecahillphotography

@grahamhilldesign

Kerry of Graham Hill Design isn't afraid to bring color to her holiday mantle, and we love her for it. With touches of muted mustard and stone blue, she brought her signature aesthetic for a coastal-inspired Christmas.