According to Kehler, the first thing your guests might notice is the railing on the staircase leading up to your front porch. "If you have any peeling or cracked paint, be sure to add a fresh coat of paint and change the color if it clashes with the stairs or the exterior of your home," she says. After that, your front door is the next visible element on your porch. "Consider repainting it a contrasting, yet complementary color to your home's exterior, adding a seasonal wreath, or switching out your doorknob for a more modern one," suggests Kehler. She also advises taking a look at your house number, which
